A Bull about Bull.

A little volume lately published in London entitled "Irish Diamonds," contains the annexed jocund descriptio of a rather notorious anecdote, and as good as anything in Joe's book:

"Any evening party, in an English country town, were bantering poor Teddy the Irishman, about his countrymen being so famous for bulls.

"By my faith," said Teddy, "you needn't talk about the same in this place; you're as fond of bulls as any people in the world, so you are."

"Nonsense!" said some of the party replied, "how do you make that out?"

"Why, sure, it's very nice, it is; for in this party but of a town you've got more public houses nor I ever seen wid the sign of a bull over the doors, so you have."

Nay, Teddy, very few of these, but there's some of em, you know, in your town."

"And so," said Teddy, asthmatically striking to his text, "he had laid a trap for his friends, 'that you've made me your, having that you're as fond of bulls as I am, I sure I can count half a dozen of em'."

"Pooh, nonsense!" cried the party, "that will never do; what will you get on that, Ted?" You'er out there, my boy, depend upon it; we know the town as well as you, and what will you get?"

"Indeed, my brave boys, I'll not bet at all; I'm no better, I assure ye,—I should be worse if I won." This sally tickled his companions, and he proceeded, "But I'll be bound to name and count the six."

"Well, da, da," said several voices.

"Now let me see; there's the Black Bull."

"There's the Red Bull."

"That's two."

"And the White Bull."

"Come, that's three."

"And the Puff Bull."

"So there is; but it may go much further."

"And then there's—there's—there's—the Golden Bull, in—what's its street?"

"Well done, Ted; that's five, sure enough; but younger short."

"Ay," said a little letter-carrier, who sat smirking in the corner, "and he will be short, for there is but one more I know."

"And then, remember," continued Teddy, carefully purring his question, "isn't the Dunn Cow?"

At once a burst of laughter fairly shook the room, and hand-knaps kept the tables and glasses rattling amidst hoarse cries of "A bull! a bull!" Looking seriously at all around, Teddy deliberately asked,—

"Do you call that a bull?"

"To be sure, it's a bull!" exclaimed several voices at once.

"Then," said Teddy, "that's the sixth!"

Here an unavoidable defect in the direct was converted into a victory in the antipodean by the cleverly obtained admission of the vanquished party themselves.

How many of both sexes run into the error of thinking that to dress drowsy is to dress well—when the two things are as different as possible; for the one excites attention, and the other avoids it. A lady who knew this distinction, ordered a cap from the milliner. "How will you have it made madam?" "Make it," replied the lady, "so that it will not excite a thought." This to us, was the best definition of what dress should be that we ever heard. But when, next and cleanly in your dress, and borrow instruction from this lady.

"Jane, you must not learn Arithmetic!" "Why mamma?" "Because, my dear, in looking through yours yesterday, I saw that the fractions were vulgar!"

It has proved itself to be the best medicine ever offered to the applicants for a cure of Consumption, and has never failed to put an end to the disease for which it is administered. Now they have to wait long in order to know whether it will be productive of good effects, as they are assured that it is.
